

On May 7th 2001 and in May of 2006, Polk County received an award in recognition of outstanding performance of its Materials Recovery Facility that is located in front of the Waste-to-Energy plant in Fosston.

This award is given annually to a facility that meets a stringent evaluation profile which includes review of numerous similar facilities throughout the US.

The award was presented to Polk County Solid Waste Resource Recovery Facility by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers at the North American Waste-to-Energy Conference. For a small facility located in rural Minnesota this achievement tremendously rewarding.

Polk County Solid Waste received other various forms of Recognition as follows:
